Government will need to play a dominant role in social welfare of public and controlling the economic activities. Government needs to make sure that each citizen has fundamental rights and the products produced in a country are within the reach of every person and beneficiary to a community. But unfortunately, it is not so simple. Since Pakistan is a capitalist state where people have freedom to produce and set the prices. Any slight shift from capitalism to socialism will provoke the market mafia to resist the changes. However, it can be implemented by first laying down the strong foundations of democracy, independent Judiciary and adaptive legislation. Democracy is itself a great problem especially in third world countries where there is low literacy rate. Independent Judiciary is also a hallmark where martial law overrides. similarly, legislation involves clergy which has narrow vision towards socialist like community(welfare state). These factors can be controlled by public awareness through education.
